Finding Your Purple Cow: an End-of-Year Motivational Seminar with Sharleen Smith, Director of Professional Development at Troy University.

Has your business plateaued? Has your position or career hit a "slow" period? As a business owner, are you out of ideas? Or maybe you need a lift in your personal life? As we look at examples of people and business generating creativity, starting initiatives and/or a gaining a new perspective, you may find your purple cow. Join us if you want to or your business needs to stand out, create change and be remarkable!

Ms. Sharleen Smith understands the needs of organizations and the challenges of today's workforce. As she leads the Professional Development Division on all Troy campuses, her goal is to collaborate with government offices and businesses to increase the professional capabilities of leaders and employees. She is an expert in more than 200 training topics including leadership, team work, communication strategies, management, and employment law. She is one of the most sought after executive coaches in Alabama, whether mentoring C-level leaders, developing younger leaders, or growing business strategies. She has vast experience in these areas serving over 300,000 people in over 8,000 seminars and conferences. Her organizational consulting has touched almost every industry in the public and private sector (troy.edu).

Seating is limited, and lunch is provided.
